

Abstract of the Disclosure

A color conversion layer includes a matrix resin, a fluorescence conversion dye and a dendrimer for converting a wavelength distribution of incident light and emitting a converted light. The fluorescence conversion dye and the dendrimer may be chemically bonded to each other via a covalent bond. Alternatively, the dendrimer may include the fluorescence conversion dye in a clathrate state.